

Show your pets you care - Be Tick Aware!

Ticks are an increasing problem in the UK, Ireland and abroad. Tick bites can:

- Cause irritation and allergic reactions
- Lead to abscesses
- Transmit diseases (such as Lyme disease)

Can You Tick The Box?

- I know how to safely remove a tick
 - I can recognise possible signs and symptoms of tick-borne disease
 - I use a tick-control product on my pet
- Your vet can offer you guidance on what products are suitable and safe.

For lots of information visit:

www.ticktwister.co.uk

Protect yourself too:

Know where to expect ticks

Rural and urban areas with good ground cover and diverse wildlife (birds, hedgehogs etc) can pose a potential risk.

Use a repellent

Tuck your trousers into your socks or wear gaiters

Do the tick check

A thorough check of your pet's body (and yours!) will help to spot and remove ticks. The longer the tick is attached and allowed to feed the higher risk of disease infection

Safe Tick Removal

When using a tick-removal tool, follow manufacturer's instructions.

Never squeeze the tick's body, burn, freeze, or smother it in substances such as petroleum jelly, spirits or oils. This is thought to induce back flow of infective agents.

Travelling abroad with your pet

Make sure you know the tick-borne disease and the symptoms to be aware of

www.ticktwister.co.uk

